DETAILED ACTION

1. The indicated allowability of claims 3 and 5 is withdrawn in view of the newly discovered reference(s) to Molloy (US 4,928,916). Rejections based on the newly cited reference(s) follow.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

3. Claims 3 and 5-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Molloy (US 4,928,916).

A secure clamping mechanism (20) comprises two spaced apart surfaces (opposite sides of 26), a resiliently compressible biasing member (52), a clamp portion (46,48) and a locking key (54,56,58). The biasing member is between the two spaced apart surfaces (48,54). The clamp portion has a drive portion (62) that is structured to be slidably engaged between the two spaced apart surfaces (Figs. 1, 2 and 4). The locking key engaging the biasing member between the drive portion and at least one of the spaced apart surfaces (Figs. 1, 2 and 4). The locking key interlocks with at least one of the two spaced apart surfaces (Figs. 1, 2 and 4).

A secure clamping mechanism (20) comprises two spaced apart surfaces (opposite sides of 26), a resiliently compressible biasing member (52), a clamp portion (46,48) and a locking key (54,56,58). The biasing member is between the two spaced apart surfaces (48,54). The clamp portion has a drive portion (62) that is structured to be slidingly engaged between the two spaced apart surfaces (Figs. 1, 2 and 4). A notch formed in at least one of the two spaced apart surfaces (Figs. 1, 2 and 4). The locking key engages the biasing member between the drive portion and at least one of the spaced apart surfaces (Figs. 1, 2 and 4). The locking key having a complementary detent engaged with the notch (Figs. 1, 2 and 4).

The drive mechanism further comprises an elongated shaft portion (46,48) that is structured to slidingly fit between the two spaced apart surfaces and that is further structured for engaging a first end of the biasing member (Figs. 1, 2 and 4).

The locking key further comprises a means for engaging a second end of the biasing member (54) opposite from the first end thereof.

The clamp portion further comprises a jaw portion (end of 46) and the elongated shaft portion further comprises a shaft portion distal from the jaw portion that is structured for engaging the first end of the biasing member (Figs. 1, 2 and 4).

Allowable Subject Matter

4. Claims 14-23 are allowed.

5. Claims 4 and 9-11 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Wallace et al. (US 2,319,377), Blake (US 3,509,882), Kemble (US 4,803,759), Blasnik (US 4,976,721), Quesada (US 5,582,377), Lu (US 6,370,741 B1) and Anderson (US 6,802,848 B2) are cited to show state of the art with respect to clamping mechanisms having some of the features being claimed by the current application.

Kela (US 5,917,907), Rankin, Jr. et al. (US 6,032,337), Kato (US 6,785,567 B2) and Chan (US 2004/0022388 A1) are cited to show state of the art with respect to cradles having a clamping mechanism with similar features to the ones being claimed by the current application.

Cheng (US 6,260,866 B1) is cited to show state of the art with respect to a secure clamping mechanism that has some of the features being claimed by the current application.
